Synopsis : After his successful debut, Director KIM endures scathing attacks from critics who call him a specialist in trashy dramas. After finishing his latest feature Cobweb, he has vivid dreams of an alternative ending to the film. He sensed that if he can just shoot those scenes as he envisioned them, a masterpiece will surely emerge. He tries to arrange just two days of additional shooting. However, the rewritten script fails to pass censorship, and his actors can't make sense of the new ending. Thus director KIM faces the harsh reality of filming under conditions. He feels that is about to go insane, but he carries on regardless.

Director's Biography : Kim Jee-woon is a South Korean film director, screenwriter, and producer, who was born on July 6, 1964. Before making his film debut in 1998 with The Quiet Family, which he wrote and directed himself, Kim worked as an actor and director in the theatre. Kim has worked in the film industry with growing degrees of success, displaying competent acting and meticulous stylization in his productions. He is presently regarded as one of the best writers and filmmakers in the Korean cinema business.
